During this crazy time with the coronavirus pandemic, everything has changed from not going to school to not even going outside. The few times I have been outside to go to the store the streets are empty since everyone is sheltering away from this invisible enemy. Everything, everyday feels the same now since I am just staying home doing the same routine each day. Time feels irrelevant since no day feels different from one another. Sometimes I feel like there's nothing to do because there isn't anything to do, and this whole experience in quarantine becomes quite boring. I hope that this pandemic can end soon and that schools can reopen and life can get back to normal.
