While most of the world was out having a big old party, a few outsiders and wierdos saw what no one else could.-Jared Vennett (The Big Short). This quote can perfectly relate to the global pandemic that has struck the health of citizens and the economy. In the film The Big Short, there is a national financial crisis. Only a few people saw the tremendous impact it had in America. This relates a lot to the current economy, which is crashing, however it relates more to the people of the world. Most people have a glass half empty outlook on having to stay at home, but few people, including me, are using it to improve themselves. When Coronavirus struck, I was bummed because I wasn't able to see my friends. But I realized I had more time on my hands and I had to fill that void. I have an interest in business and I started to think of business ideas. I found one I liked and would be helpful to the public so I pursued it. The smart people are using this time to learn, improve, and strive.
