Coronavirus

During Coronavirus, my parents have been worried. They worry about the spread and the danger it can bring. My father works in nursing homes, so he has a lot of things he has to do because the disease is incredibly dangerous for the elderly. My mother is being extremely cautious at home for everything that we bring inside to avoid any of us catching Coronavirus. I'm not overly worried about catching Coronavirus myself because it doesn't affect children too much, usually, but I am afraid if my grandparents catch it.

With school being online, I have actually had more free time. I don't know what everybody else's workload is, but I, personally, have significantly less work. I enjoy having more free time because school is already about eight hours and dual-curricular. I personally like school better online because of the extra time. I understand the worry of Coronavirus and believe that the idea of everybody being home is a great solution. The spread will reduce as a result of this. We really all just need to do our part now.

It is easy for me to stay home and do this because I have a lot of things I could do. I have four dogs, family around, and a lot of games to play. I have taken this transition to being home pretty easily I believe and actually enjoy some of being constantly at home. Coronavirus did seem to come out of nowhere though because the worry came really rapidly when it was discovered. It was hard to get everything you need in that short of a time, but we got everything we needed in the end.
