Going through the experience of this pandemic is something that I will remember for the rest of my life. It has emphasized to me more than ever, that the most important things in life are not things at all. Rather, they are your people, your camp; including your family, good friends, and good deeds. Being quarantined for this length of time has forced me to do some reflection. I think the greatest lesson that I have learned is that when this ends, I want to be better. More kind, more patient, more tolerant, more grateful, and more empathetic. I think we all have to be better.
